📍 The fact that the Librairie Mollat bookshop is 122 years old hasn't stopped it from launching a viral Instagram campaign. The French store's Book Face series merges employees' faces with book covers for optical illusion portraits, with hair and clothing seamlessly fusing with the covers to fill in the bigger picture. "We were inspired by the 'sleeveface' vinyl trend from the noughties," bookseller David Pigeret says. "The tricky part is finding the right angle and distance between the model and photographer." @librairie_mollat ✈️ FLY TO BORDEAUX SIX TIMES WEEKLY

Raise the roof

Ibiza's party season kicks off this month. But what kind of raver are you?

May heralds the beginning of Ibiza's club season, with partiers flocking to the sunny isle to sunbathe all day and dance until sunrise. While once upon a time, EDM was the order of the day (or night), Ibiza's nightclubs are drawing DJs from increasingly diverse genres and putting on shows for every kind of clubber. Pick the beat that works for you..

ART {Lisbon}

Cultural crossover

Africa's most innovative contemporary artists are showcased in Portugal

An hour and a half from Lisbon, you can visit another continent at the Evora Africa Festival (25 May-25 August) – Portugal's first contemporary African arts festival. It features events and exhibits the work of over 30 artists from Burkina Faso, Ivory Coast, Senegal and more, in the azulejo-tiled Cadaval Palace in Evora. "Through art, all cultural bonds can be strengthened," says festival director Alexandra de Cadaval.
